GEORGE FERDINAND BECKER. He writes: "Since the summer of 1879, I have been continuously in the service of the United States Geological Survey. Early in 1880 I was assigned to the duty of investigating the Comstock Lode. I spent a year at the locality and another, in writing my report upon it, in New York City. Early in 1880 I was also made a special agent of the census of 1880, and assigned to the duty of collecting, through assistants, the data for a report on the Statistics and Technology of the Precious Metals west of the Rocky Mountains. At a later date I was placed in charge of the entire census investigation of the precious metals, vice Clarence King resigned. The final report on this subject, by Mr. S. F. Emmons and myself, was completed at New York in January, 1882. I then returned to the Pacific Coast to undertake an investigation of the geology of the quicksilver deposits of the Pacific Slope. This work kept me in California, a part of the time in the field and a part of the time in San Francisco, till the spring of 1886, when I came to Washington to complete my report. This was substantially finished early in 1887. Under orders from the Secretary of the Interior, I then visited the famous Spanish quicksilver mine, Almaden, and the quicksilver mines of Tuscany, for the purpose of comparing the mode of occurence of quicksilver ores in Europe with that in this country. It was a very pleasant and satisfactory trip, and enabled me to meet many old friends in various countries, as well as correspondents whom I had never seen before. My report on quicksilver, embodying many notes from my trip to Europe, was transmitted last July. It is still in the printer's hands and I shall be detained in Washington until I can obtain proof sheets. Meantime, through my staff in California, I have begun a survey of the gold belt of California, taking in practically the entire western slope of the Sierra Nevada. The area embraced is 12,000 square miles, or about one and a half times the size of Massachusetts. It will be many years before it can be completed. I was appointed by the President a member of the Assay Commission of 1888, and served in that capacity.

"My larger publications since January, 1880, are as follows: Atomic Weight Determinations, a digest of the investigations published since 1814. Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collections, No. 358, 1880, 149 pp. Mining Industries at the Paris Exposition of 1878. Report of the United States Commissioners, Vol. 4, 1880, pp. 165 to 361, [by J. D. Hague and myself; full acknowledgment of authorship only in imprints distributed by the authors.] Geology of the Comstock Lode and the Washoe District, Monograph United States Geological Survey, No. III, 1882, 422 pp., with atlas of 21 sheets. Statistics and Technology of the Precious Metals; Tenth Census, Vol. XIII, 1885, 541 pp. [By S. F. Emmons and myself.] In press, Geology of the Quicksilver Deposits of the Pacific Slope; Monograph United States Geological Survey, No. XIII, 1888, about 350 pp., with Atlas of 13 sheets.

"In addition to the above I have published during this period fifteen papers in the American Journal of Science and elsewhere, on various geological and physical subjects. I will spare you an enumeration of titles. My last paper was somewhat of an excursus for me. It deals with the silver question and is entitled, Notes on the relative production and value of the Precious Metals. It forms a part of Edward Atkinson's Report on Bimetallism in Europe, a Senate Document, reprinted in the Consular Reports.

"On June 22, 1880, my wife, nee Miss Alice Theodora Watson of New York, to whom I had been married a single short year, died, leaving me childless.

" My permanent address is care of the United States Geological Survey, San Francisco, Cal. ; but letters addressed to the Washington office of the Survey will, of course, always reach me, and, for the present, more speedily than if sent to San Francisco."

empire, then north to Chefu and Peking, and from there with a caravan to and beyond the great wall into Mongolia, and the treeless table lands on the overland route to Siberia. An attack by the natives, who answer to the Scythians described by Herodotus, forced our return and that summer was passed in Japan." They then visited Java and were "received by the Viceroy and provided with letters for the interior."

From Java they went to Malacca and Burmah, reaching India in January, 1881. At Calcutta they were "received by the Viceroy and entertained several times at Government House." In attempting to reach Mt. Everest they "were snowed up and alone and without food for over 24 hours, at a height of between 12,000 and 13,000 feet." They "almost reached the borders of Thibet, but were not allowed to pass." In India they were often "the guests of the native Rajahs, and saw a number of their durbars; hunted with the chetas of the Gaikwàr of Baroda; saw the wonderful jewels at Ulwar and Mysore; visited Ceylon; met Lord Ripon a second time at a great durbar at Agra; was a second time at Delhi and then * * crossed the Indus and entered the Khyber Pass with an escort of 1,200 men sent by the courtesy of the Lieut.-Governor, Sir Robert Egerton. Afterwards in British Afghanistan we were his guests for a fortnight in camp, marching with elephants and a guard of 5,000 men through the hostile country of the Afridis." They then went up the Tigris river to Bagdad, and crossed the desert to Babylon. At the shrine of Hossein, the grandson of Mahomet, "owing to the fanaticism of the people we had to be protected by some 50 Turkish soldiers; we stayed in the seraglio of the Pasha that night, leaving in the morning." Afterwards they went from Bushire in Persia to Shiraz by caravan. "From Shiraz to Isfahan is 305 miles. By relays of horses with a single servant we rode the entire distance in 78 consecutive hours, doing 108 miles in one day and 102 another." They then crossed the desert to Yezd, "the home of the Zoroastrians," where "my wife was the first European lady ever seen in the city and hundreds followed us through the streets." They were the guests of the English legation at Teheran, and "I was received by the Shah and presented with a beautiful carpet woven in Khorassan." "We went into Media to Hamadan, where Alexander feasted after the battle of Gaugamela; pitched our tents for a week amidst the stately ruins of Persepolis; went to the marble mausoleum where Cyrus was buried at Passagardæ, and read on the rocks at Behistun the cuneiform inscription cut by Darius Hydaspes. Returning to Teheran we made an excursion to the site of Rhage, mentioned in the Apocrypha, and then rode to Tabriz."

Mrs. Phelps' illness with malarial fever then prevented a two weeks' march to Nineveh; Mr. Phelps became nearly blind; and to avoid being snowed in for the winter they started for the Russian frontier. He "had to be kept in darkness, so we rode 80 miles the first night to the river Araxes." At "Tiflis in the Caucasus the snows and my opthalmia compelled us to remain many weeks." After much difficulty they reached Constantinople, through Bulgaria.

A letter from Pau, France, June 6, 1885, announced the birth of a son, Harris Charles Livingston Phelps, May 15, 1885. He was then expecting to spend a year in Italy.

JOSIAH LAFAYETTE SEWARD. He writes that "Since your last report, I have remained steadily in charge of my parish in Lowell. On the first day of January, 1888, I resigned my charge in Lowell, that I might accept a call from Waterville, Maine. My Lowell pastorate will terminate on July 31, 1888, and my pastorate at Waterville will begin on the following day, August 1. I have been induced to make this change, partly because of needed refreshment after a laborious pastorate in one place of fourteen years, and partly that I may have a little more time for study and the writing of two or three books which I have in preparation.

"While in Lowell, I have been a director for a dozen years of 'The Ministry-at-Large in Lowell;' a director, for several years, of the Lowell Silent Society; President of the Channing Fraternity, an incorporated society for literary and charitable purposes; a director of the City Institution for Savings in Lowell; and, for many years, a director of the Lowell City Library. To this latter institution I devoted much time. I originated and superintended the method of making the new card catalogue, during which time I personally examined more than twenty thousand volumes of books, for classification.

"I am a member of the Plato Club, whose membership is confined to the more prominent literary persons of the city, and of the Field Club, whose members study the natural history of the locality. I am a corresponding member of the New Hampshire Historical Society and have been elected a member of the Webster Historical Society. I am Secretary of the Divinity School Alumni Association.

"I am also a member of the New Hampshire Club, a life member of the American Unitarian Association, and an honorary member, and the chaplain, of the Keene, N. H., Light Guard Battalion.

"In respect to masonic associations, I am a member of Social Friends' Lodge, of Cheshire Royal Arch Chapter, of St. John's Council of Royal and Select Masters, and of Hugh de Payens Commandery of Knights Templar, also an honorary member of the Lodge of the Temple, all of which bodies have their headquarters at Keene. I have acted as the prelate of the commandery, and am the presiding officer of the council. In Lowell, I am an honorary member of Kilwinning Lodge, a member of Lowell Lodge of Perfection, of Lowell Council of Princes of Jerusalem, and of Mt. Calvary Chapter of Rose–Croix. I am the presiding officer of the latter body, and the chaplain of Kilwinning Lodge. I am also the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Council of New Hampshire. In Boston, I am a member of Massachusetts Consistory. I am the representative of the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of England (masonic), near the Grand Council of New Hampshire. In September last, at Providence, R. I., I was honored with the thirty-third and last degree.

"I have published historical discourses giving the history of the Unitarian Church in Lowell, and the Free Chapel of Lowell. I have published 'Lessons upon the Old Testament,' and 'Lessons upon the New Testament.' These two publications were issued in serials and have no definite dates. I am preparing a 'History of Sullivan, N. H.,' and have just edited the 'Centennial proceedings of the Town of Sullivan, N. H.,' Lowell, Morning Mail Co., 1888.

"I delivered the oration at the Sullivan Centennial, September 27, 1887. Several years ago, I was the Fourth of July orator at Lowell. I have written many magazine articles which I cannot name accurately now."

Is unmarried.
